FRENCH SHIPS SHELL BUILDING OCCUPIED BY U. S. OFFICIAL

State Department Makes Inquiry of French Government Regarding Bombardment of Alexandria.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Inquiry was made of the French government regarding circumstances of the bombardment Sept. 4th by a French fleet at Alexandria, Asiatic Turkey, during which the building occupied by William Brewster of New York, American consular agent, was riddled. Officials said today that the state department would ask whether the shelling of the building was a result of carelessness or not.

Three French auxiliary cruisers and two torpedo boats comprised the bombarding fleet according to a report to the department today, from the American embassy at Constantinople. Nine shells struck the building occupied by Brewster, merely is employed to forward consular information, work formerly done by a Turkish minister, and as the equipment furnished him by the United States cost only a few hundred dollars, no claim for damages will be filed by the department.

EX-CONVICT SUSPECT BEFORE COURT FOR 'FRISCO BOMB PLOT

Authorities Think They Have Conspirators Who Set Off Bomb as Preparedness Parade Passed.

THE DEFENDANT AND HIS ASSOCIATES. Warren K. Billings, an ex-convict, Thomas J. Mooney, who attempted early in June to foment a strike of platform men of the United Railroads of San Francisco, and Edward Nolan, delegate of the machinists' union to the 1916 International convention of the union in Baltimore, are the defendants.

The crime was the explosion of a bomb hidden in a suitcase, the crowd watching the Preparedness parade in San Francisco July 22, 1916. Ten lives were lost and 35 persons were injured.

San Francisco, Sept. 11.—The first of the bomb cases resulting from the explosion of an infernal machine in a suitcase planted in the Preparedness parade crowd here July 22, began today when Warren K. Billings, principal suspect, went to trial.

The theory of the prosecution is that Billings and his confederates were not anti-preparedness cranks, as at first was supposed, but sought to blow up the local United Railroads, a division of which would have been passing the bomb suitcase at the moment it exploded if Thomas J. Mooney had not been delayed in the bomb plot, unsuccessfully has tried to organize a strike among these employees and the prosecution will claim the bomb was used to get even with the men.

The trials of the four other defendants, Mooney, his wife, Mrs. Rena Mooney, Israel Weinberg and Edward Nolan, will be held later. Evidence expected to be given.

The prosecution is based on the theory that Billings, under instructions from Mooney, planted the bomb, that Mooney was an accessory before and after the fact; that Nolan either manufactured or assisted in manufacturing accessory and that Weinberg reported the conspiracy in his jitney bus and had guilty knowledge of the plot.

Four persons were killed outright and the paraders panic stricken when the bomb exploded at the intersection of Stewart and Market streets, in the crowd of 25,000 people. One man died of heart failure and 40 persons were injured, of whom 5 later died.

Among the leaden missiles, automobile bearings and bits of metals that sprayed the crowd like shrapnel, enough pieces of leather and clockwork mechanism were picked up to show that the bomb had been set to explode at 2:10 p. m.

Billings served a term at Folsom prison for dynamiting.

Whittet of Edgerton, speaker of the last legislature is already an announced candidate. Many of the followers of the progressive wing of the republicans are talking of Assemblyman Charles D. BRIDGE SPAN IN COLLAPSE KILLS SCORE

MAMMOTH SECTION OF QUEBEC CANTILEVER SUSPENS ON BRIDGE DROPS INTO ST. LAWRENCE.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Quebec, Sept. 11.—The new central span of Quebec bridge, the largest cantilever suspension in the world, collapsed and fell into the St. Lawrence river while being hoisted today, with a probable loss of twenty-five lives. Observers on shore saw workmen in the water.

The bridge was being constructed at a cost of $2,000,000, and when the span was lowered from the Canadian northwest by two hundred miles. The bridge stands on the site of the structure which collapsed on August 28, 1907 with a loss of seventy lives.

Nineteen Men on Structure. The central span which fell today weighs more than 5,000 tons and is 640 feet long. The collapse occurred when the span was about fifteen feet in the air. Nineteen men were on the structure when it fell. Some of the hundreds of spectators' craft were rushed to the spot where the span disappeared.

The fallen structure sank two hundred feet to the bottom of the river, and engineers express doubt as to whether it would ever be raised.

Observers said the span broke in two places, one of the corners first appearing to give way, followed almost immediately by a break in the center. The span had been constructed on pontoons a few miles east of the bridge site and was in position under a gap left in the anchor arms of the structure. Chains with links thirty inches in diameter were then attached to the span and 800 ton hydraulic jacks commenced to lift the span into place.

This work could be accomplished only a few feet an hour. As distance to the bottom of the floor of bridge was 100 feet the engineers had counted on completing the operations for several days. The bridge was to have been ready for train service next spring.

Many Spectators on Hand. The juggling of 5,000 tons of steel attracted several thousand spectators, including members of parliament of the dominion of Canada and newspaper men gathered on government vessels. American authorities on bridge building of the boats of all classes. Uninjured and members of the Australian parliament returning home after visiting in Europe, all were at the scene, and river traffic for ocean going steamships had been temporarily suspended.

The project interrupted today originated in 1853. It was not until 1882, however, that the scheme for a serious consideration. Later Canadian engineers obtained a charter and after many years of delay, the building was begun, only to terminate in the collapse of the unfinished structure in 1907.

Canada's federal railway department then decided to reconstruct and place the undertaking in the hands of a commission which included several noted American bridge builders, among them Ralph Modjeski of Chicago and C. C. Schneider of New York.

The plans for the bridge provided for a cantilever span longer than that of any existing today anywhere. Its contemplated length from shore to shore was 3,238 feet, with a distance of 1,800 feet between anchor buttresses. Provision was made for two railroad tracks, two street car tracks and two roads.

FRIENDSHIP, SUBJECT OF NEW U. B. PASTOR

DECLARES FRIENDSHIP MUST BE UNSELFISH, UNIVERSAL, UN-SWERVING AND RECIP-ROCAL.

JESUS A TRUE FRIEND

Thorough Understanding of One Another Brings Friendship—Frienship With Jesus is Uplifting.

Reverend C. E. Ashcraft delivered the sermon at the United Brethren church yesterday. Dr. Ashcraft is the dean of York College at York, Nebraska, but will fill the pulpit at the United Brethren church during the absence of Hart Truesdale, who is on leave of absence. The subject of the sermon was "Friendship." The text was from John 15:13-15, "Friendship of Jesus."

Dr. Ashcraft made a distinction between men who were intimately connected with him in his work and those at a distance. His disciples were his friends at first. The present chapter has to do with fellowship, growth and fruitfulness in the Kingdom. There can be neither fellowship nor fruitfulness with Jesus without there is first friendship.

"A friend," says Carlisle, "is one who knows the best in you and the worst, and is yet your friend and is true to you. Jesus Christ is one who knows us as no other person does. He knows and yet believes in humanity. How few people there are to whom we turn our lives inside out and trust implicitly."

God's care for humanity is the great revelation Jesus made to the world, and He knows humanity. "Friendship is based on confidence. Confidence depends upon knowledge. Knowledge is something attained through activity and relationship. All life is based on that principle and that is our friends, our God, a grave injustice if we do not recognize that principle."

"Let us look at some of the traits of friendship as suggested by Jesus. The first thing that strikes a person in considering this immortal friend is His unselfishness. That trait is necessary in all friendship which is worth while. It was manifest in Jesus' life in all he did. Even when His enemies were at his worst you can see Him at his best. 'Father forgive them' is His enemy's prayer. He loved His enemies even as his friends. Jesus again showed His unselfishness by imparting His life for His friend Lazarus by aiding him in his greatest hour of need. His usefulness as a trait in friendship which alone makes Him unique."

"The second characteristic trait of Jesus' friendship was that it was cosmic. He was wholly free from the prejudice of caste. His friendship was manifest for all. He could be a friend to ignorant, stupid, impulsive, feeble, blustering, distrustful men—all of them."

"His friendship was unswerving. He remained faithful to His friends. Convictions, emotions, fashions, changes in the world, His friendship is as it is. It shall never change. Jesus' doctrine of friendship was once a friend always a friend. Jesus makes friendship physical. It's akin to love, a spiritual entity. Jesus never spoke words of flattery or adulation about his friends. His friendship was a growing ideal for all."

"The basis of friendship with Jesus was reciprocity. You can't have a friend without you are one. There is no such thing as one-sided friendship. Where there is no equality, where there is the relationship of master and servant, as the Jews preached was that of God and man, there can be no friendship; the basis for it is gone. The Lord does not reveal his secrets to his servants but to his friends. You can't have Jesus as master and yet as friend; however paradoxical that may seem. Jesus is first a friend and then knowing Him we crown Him Lord."

"Friendship requires mutual confidence, frankness, openness. The modern secret society, friendship is broken. Equality must be present; community of experience, ideals, sacrifices and the like. In this sense, friendship is like life. His life was that of pure humanity as far as experience was concerned. Friendship like that of Jesus is attractive and charming and inspiring, all the world claims Him as their friend. He is the sinner's friend and the saint's; a friend that sticks closer than a brother. Jesus discovered that when we live and played himself on that plane. He was willing to get into the ditch to help us out. Jesus' authority rested on what He was; it depended upon His friendship with all mankind."

"His friendship was a conscious social ideal. Jesus lived His own ideals as indicated by His enemies, who called him a friend of publicans, and called him a friend of sinners. Hypocrisy had no place with Him; no friendship can be based on stage acting. No false pretense was open to His followers; they had to be true or else they were not His friends. His love and confidence is destroyed and the value of His life is lost. The church has more and more of this spirit. Men are not hypocrites; they lose unity. Denominational lines are vanishing. The church today is getting above creed and doctrine to the higher plane of friendship and love which was characteristic of the 'friend of sinners.'"

"Friendship is the communion of two souls based on the harmony of two fundamental ideals in life. This is inevitable; if two are living out of harmony with the ideals of life or if their ideals are separating the friendship must cease."

"In an open minded, frank talk about the things we are interested in, little by little I see your point of view and you see mine. The better things of your life will appeal to me and the better things of my life will appeal to you, and thus friendship will grow and a real fundamental harmony will be formed. Thus it is seen that association is necessary for friendship. Only when we see each other's point of view can we be true friends. If we are to be friends with Jesus Christ we must go to Him in an open minded, friendly spirit. We will ask in His presence and find what He thinks of us and our ideals; we will study Him and His ideals, plans and purpose, then when we see each other we have a true friend in Jesus. And when we are in the presence of these ideals we will be unconsciously drawn to them and will consequently be uplifted."

With seven or eight new pupils today the enrollment at the Janesville high school reached the five hundred mark, the largest number ever known in attendance at that school. The crowded conditions have necessitated the addition of another member to the teaching force of the mathematics department. Miss West of Milton Junction is temporarily filling the position. She will leave, as soon as another teacher is secured, for New Jersey, where she is to teach this year.

Miss Gail Kane.

"You are too pretty to be fined, but the next homely woman that comes before me for the same offense will have to suffer," said Justice Lyster of Glen Cove, L. I., when Gail Kane, moving picture actress, was brought before him on a charge of speeding. Miss Kane had pleaded guilty to the offense.

Test of a Good Book.

That is a good book which is opened with expectation and closed with profit. It is a wise book that is good from title page to the end. One masterpiece, fairly mastered, prepares the reader to master the great pieces of literature. The encyclopedia of details may be left for less occupied and thoughtful moments.—Amos Bronson Alcott.

The Servant Problem.

"If there is a servant problem it is largely the fault of the employer." Of course, dear young bachelor maid scribbler. There are so many housekeepers who overlook the importance of serving the cook her breakfast in bed and asking her if there is any little thing that could be done to make her more comfortable.

NEWS NOTES MOVIELAND BY DAISY DEAN

Alice Joyce, who in private life is Mrs. Tom Moore, wife of the movie star, and Tom took their new baby, Alice Mary Moore, down to the seashore every pleasant day during the summer. And that was all the vacation they had.

Movie actors who work as extras, to fill in the background of pictures, are organizing a union in New York. For some time these extras have been employed by the producers through certain theatrical agencies. The extras believe they have been exploited by the agencies and are forming an organization to deal with the producers directly.

The scale of wages they ask is $3 a day each when the number employed is less than 100, and $2 a day when the number is more than 100. For what they call hazardous work they ask a daily wage of $7.50.

A good many situations which look hazardous when the pictures are shown on the screen are not so in fact. But a good many stunts required of movie actors are really dangerous. What one is risking one's life by the day, one may not be unreasonable in asking $7.50, or even $8.

The life of the theatrical agents whom the extra actors criticize is not without its hazards. For instance, there was the agency that collected vegetable types for the producer of a crook play.

The agent got a crowd of types with twisted noses and cauliflower ears together in his office and sent them to the studio.

The studio wanted only six. The others were disappointed. Some of them were picked. One might with safety, perhaps, pick types selected for the congregation of a village church, but not this lot. They went back to the agency with their hats on the side of their heads, and suggested that the agent pay them for their time.

They made the suggestion so forcefully that the scared agent sent in a hurry call for the police.

Ivan, revealer of the night side of life, of its bestiality, madness, cruelty and terrific visions, now offers a new feature, "The Faded Flower," with an all-star cast. Ivan is a relentless fellow in giving evil its deserts and pressing a moral without unreasonable in asking $7.50, or even $8.

Life Insurance Pre-eminent. Of all good things, life insurance stands pre-eminent. The standard of safety, conservation, preparedness for the dismal hour, and blessings of the family and the home. Observe the picture of those who valued the golden opportunity to face the world and contrast it with the knowledge that started right entails power and might. Education life insurance is now extended into the largest colleges, expounded from the pulpit to include the congregation to the virtues and need of the masterful protector, and in time to be exemplified in high schools.

Historic Frigate to Be Merchantman. Henry Hinder's Sons of Philadelphia, who purchased the historic frigate Franklin from the government, will put the vessel in service again as a merchantman because of the attractive rates on ocean freight. The Franklin was built more than 100 years ago. She was used for twenty-five years as a receiving ship at this port, and several months ago was sold at public auction for less than $4,000. The old ship is now in dry dock at the Norfolk navy yard, and will be towed to Philadelphia, where she will be fitted out and sent back to sea as a sailing vessel.

Historic Frigate to Be Merchantman. Henry Hinder's Sons of Philadelphia, who purchased the historic frigate Franklin from the government, will put the vessel in service again as a merchantman because of the attractive rates on ocean freight. The Franklin was built more than 100 years ago. She was used for twenty-five years as a receiving ship at this port, and several months ago was sold at public auction for less than $4,000. The old ship is now in dry dock at the Norfolk navy yard, and will be towed to Philadelphia, where she will be fitted out and sent back to sea as a sailing vessel.

Stevens grinned. "Wal, I should think I'd be particular proud to be mixed with a man of your reputation."

"See here, my good fellow, that's all nonsense," declared Duane, in some haste.

"Shore I think modesty becomin' to a youngster," replied Stevens. "I hate a brag. Buck, I don't know much about you. But every man who's lived along the Texas border remembers a boy about your age. I just heard that you was lightnin' on the draw, an' when you cut loose with a gun, wal, the tiger on the ace of spades would cover your cluster of bullet holes. That's the word that's gone down the border. Now, Buck, I'm not a spring chicken, an' I've been long on the dodge. Maybe a little of my society won't hurt you now. You'll need to learn the country."

"There was some one who swore an' blabbed about this outlaw," Duane said, looking at Stevens.

"I dare say you're right," replied Duane, quietly. "An' I'll go to Mercer with you."

Next moment he was riding down the road with Stevens. Duane had never been much of a talker, and now he found speech difficult. But his companion did not seem to mind that. He was a loose, reliable fellow, probably glad now to hear the sound of his own voice. Duane listened, and sometimes he thought with a pang of the distinction of name and heritage of blood his father had left to him.

CHAPTER III.

Late that day, a couple of hours before sunset, Duane and Stevens, having passed their horses in the shade of some mesquites near the town of Mercer, and had up and prepared to move.

"Buck, as we're lookin' for grub, an' not grub, I reckon you'd better hang up on me," Stevens was saying, as he mounted. "You see, towns an' short-shorts an' razors are always lookin' for new riders who had. They sort of forget most of the old boys, except those who are famous. Now, nobody in Mercer will take notice of me. I reckon there's been a thousand men run into the other country to become outlaws since your time. You just wait here an' be ready to ride hard. Maybe my horse's sin will go operational in spite of my good intentions, in which case you'll be—"

His pause was significant. He grinned, and his brown eyes danced with a kind of wild humor.

"Stevens, have you got any money?" asked Duane.

"Money?" exclaimed Luke blankly. "Say I haven't owned a two-bit piece since—wal, for some time."

"I'll furnish money for grub," returned Duane, "an' for whisky, too, providin' you bring back home—with out makin' trouble."

"Shore, you're a downright good pard," declared Stevens, in admiration, as he took the money. "I give my word, Buck, an' I'm here to say I never broke it yet. Lay low, an' look for me back quick."

With that he spurred his horse and rode out of the mesquites toward the town. At that distance, about a quarter of a mile, Mercer appeared to be a cluster of low adobe houses set in a grove of cottonwood. Pastures of alfalfa were dotted by horses and cattle. Duane saw a sheep herder driving in a meager flock.

Presently Stevens rode out of sight into the town. Duane waited, hoping the outlaw would make good his word. Probably not an hour had elapsed when Duane heard the clear reports of a Winchester rifle, the clatter of rapid hoofbeats, and yells unmistakably the kind to mean danger for a man like Stevens. Duane mounted and rode to the edge of the mesquites.

He saw a cloud of dust down the road and a boy horse running fast. Stevens apparently had not been wounded by any of the shots, for he had a steady seat in his saddle, and his riding, even at that moment, struck Duane as admirable. He carried a large pack over the pommel, and he kept looking back. The shots had ceased, but the yells increased. Duane saw several men running and waving their arms. Then he spurred his horse and got into a swift stride, so Stevens would not pass him. Presently the outlaw caught up with him. Stevens was grinning, but there was now no fun in the dancing eyes. It was a devil that danced in them. His face seemed a shade paler.

"Was just comin' out of the store," yelled Stevens. "Run plumb into a rancher—who knowed me. He opened up with a rifle. Think they'll chase us."

They covered several miles before there were any signs of pursuit, and when horsemen did move into sight out of the cottonwoods Duane and his companion steadily drew farther away.

"No hosses in that bunch to worry us," called out Stevens.

Duane had the same conviction, and he did not look back again. He rode somewhat to the fore, and was constantly aware of the rapid flapping of hoofs behind, as Stevens kept close to him. At sunset they reached the willow brakes and the river. Duane's horse was winded and lashed with sweat and lather. It was not until the crossing had been accomplished that Duane halted to rest his animal. Stevens was riding up the sandy bank. He reeled in the saddle. With an exclamation of surprise, Duane leaped off and ran to the outlaw's side.

Stevens was pale, and his face bore beads of sweat. The whole front of his shirt was soaked with blood.

"You're shot!" cried Duane.

"Wal, who said I wasn't? Would you mind gettin' me a lift—on this here pack?"

Duane lifted the heavy pack down and then helped Stevens to dismount. The outlaw had a bloody foam on his lips, and he was spitting blood.

"Oh, why didn't you say so?" cried Duane. "I never thought. You seemed all right."

"Wal, Luke Stevens may be as gabby as an old woman, but sometimes he doesn't say anything. It wouldn't have done no good."

Duane made him sit down, removed his shirt, and washed the blood from his breast and back. Stevens had been shot in the breast, fairly low down, and the bullet had gone clear through him. His ride, holding himself and that heavy pack in the saddle, had been a feat little short of marvelous. Duane did not see how it had been possible, and he felt no hope for the outlaw. But he plugged the wounds and bound them tightly.

"Feller's name was Brown," Stevens said. "Me an' him fell out over a hoss I stole from him over in Huntsville. We had a shootin' scrape then. Wal, as I was standin' my hoss back there in Mercer I seen this Brown, an' seen him before he seen me. Could have killed him, too. But I wasn't breakin' my word to you. I kind of hoped he wouldn't spot me. But he did—an' just shot me here. What do you think of this hole?"

"It's pretty bad," replied Duane; and he could not look the cheerful outlaw in the eyes.

"I reckon it is. Wal, I've had some bad wounds I lived over. Guess maybe I can stand this one. Now, Buck, get me some place in the brakes, leave me some grub an' water at my hand, an' then you clear out."

"Leave you here alone?" asked Duane sharply.

"Shore. You see I can't keep up with you. Brown an' his friends will follow us across the river a ways. You've got to think of number one in this game."

"What would you do in my case?" asked Duane curiously.

"Wal, I reckon I'd clear out an' save my hide," replied Stevens.

Duane felt inclined to doubt the outlaw's assertion. For his own part, he decided his conduct without further speech. First he watered the horses, filled canteens and water bag, and then tied the pack upon his own horse. That done, he lifted Stevens upon his horse, and, holding him in the saddle, turned into the brakes, being careful to pick out hard or grassy ground that left little signs of tracks. Just about dark he ran across a trail that Stevens said was a good one to take into the wild country.

"Reckon we'd better keep right on in the dark—rill I drop," continued Stevens, with a laugh.

All that night Duane, gloomy and thoughtful, attentive to the wounded outlaw, walked the trail and never halted. Dawn caught the fugitives at a green camping site on the bank of a rocky little stream. Stevens fell a dead weight into Duane's arms, and one look at the haggard face showed Duane that the outlaw had taken his last ride. He knew it, too. Yet that cheerfulness prevailed.

"Buck, will you take off my boots?" he asked, with a faint smile on his pallid face.

Duane removed them, wondering if the outlaw had the thought that he did not want to die with his boots on. Stevens seemed to read his mind.

"Buck, my old daddy used to say that I was born to be hanged. But I wasn't—an' dyin' with your boots on is the next worst way to croak."

"You've a chance to—to get over this," said Duane.

"Shore. But I want to be correct about the boots—an' say, pard, if I do go over, just you remember that I was appreciatin' your kindness."

This matter of the outlaw's boots was strange, Duane thought. He made Stevens as comfortable as possible, then attended to his own needs. And the outlaw took up the thread of his conversation where he had left off the night before.

"This trail splits up a ways from here, an' every branch of it leads to a hole where you'll find men—a few, maybe, like yourself—some like me—an' gangs of no-good hoss thieves, rustlers an' such. It's easy livin'. Buck, I reckon, though, that you'll not find it easy. You'll never mix in. You'll be a lone wolf. I seen that right off. Wal, if a man can stand the loneliness, an' if he's quick on the draw, maybe lone-wolfin' is the best. Shore I don't know. But these fellers in here will be suspicious of a man who goes it alone. If they got a chance they'll kill you."

Stevens asked for water several times. He had forgotten or he did not want the whisky. His voice grew perceptibly weaker.

"Be quiet," said Duane. "Talkin' uses up your strength."

"Aw, I'll talk till I'm done," he replied.

He Made Stevens as Comfortable as Possible.

plied, doggedly. "See here, pard, you can gamble on what I'm tellin' you. An' it'll be useful. From this camp we'll—you'll meet men right along. An' none of them will be better'n others. I've lived along the river for twelve years. There's three big gangs of outlaws. King Fisher—you know him. I reckon, fer he's half the time livin' among respectable folks. King is a good feller. It'll do to tie up with him an' his gang. Now, there's Chesel-dine, who hangs out in the Rim Rock way up the river. He's an outlaw chief. I never seen him, though I stayed once right in his camp. Late years he's got rich, an' keeps back pretty well hid. But Bland—I knowed Bland for years. An' I haven't any use fer him. Bland has the biggest gang. You ain't likely to miss strikin' his place sometime or other. He's got a regular town. I might say. Shore there's some gambler an' gun-fightin' goin' on in Bland's camp all the time. Bland has killed some twenty men, an' there's not countin' greasers."

Here Stevens took another drink, and then rested for a while.

"You ain't likely to get on with Bland," he resumed presently. "You're too strappin' big an' good-lookin' to please the chief. Fer he's got women in his camp. Then he'd be jealous of your possibilities with a gun. Shore I reckon he'd be careful, though. Bland's no fool, an' he loves his hide."

I reckon any of the other gangs would be better for you when you ain't goin' it alone."

Apparently that exhausted the fund of information and advice Stevens had been eager to impart. He lapsed into silence and lay with closed eyes. Meanwhile the sun rose warm; the breeze waved the mesquites; the birds came down to splash in the shallow stream; Duane dozed in a comfortable seat. By and by something roused him. Stevens was once more talking, but with a changed tone.

"Feller's name was Brown," he rambled. "We fell out—over a hoss I stole from him—in Huntsville. He stole it fast. Brown's one of them sneaks—afraid of the open—he steals an' pretends to be honest. Say, Buck, maybe you'll meet Brown some day—You an' me are pards now."

"I'll remember, if I ever meet him," said Duane.

That seemed to satisfy the outlaw. Presently he tried to lift his head, but had not the strength. A strange shade was creeping across the bronzed, rough face.

"My feet are pretty heavy," Shore you got my boots off?"

Too Much for Man.
It is impossible for a mere man to comprehend how a woman knows the exact angle at which it will be fashionable to perch her hat.—Pittsburgh Post.

Young people need clear complexions. If you find yourself "left out" because of a poor skin, and want a clear, fresh complexion, use Resinol Soap.

at least once a day. Wash thoroughly with a warm, creamy lather of it, then rinse the face with plenty of cold water. It does not often take many days of such regular care with Resinol Soap to show an improvement, because the Resinol medication softens and refreshes the skin, while the perfectly pure soap is cleaning it. Resinol Soap and Ointment treat eczema and similar skin eruptions and usually stop itching instantly.

Keeping up with the procession is not enough for the General—he must lead. And lead he does—in volume, quality and price. The General's leadership is due to the enormous resources at his command—the five m's of modern manufacturing—men, money, mills, machinery and materials.

Men who have learned the roofing business through years of practical experience are in charge of every department of the business. Men who have made a life study of the blending of asphalts comprise the General's Board of Expert Chemists.

Money—the means to promote efficiency, increase out-put, reduce cost, prevent waste—is at the General's call in abundance.

Mills—the largest roofing mills in the world are the General's. They are advantageously located at points where cost of fuel, access to raw materials and quick distribution of finished products are most favorable.

Machinery—the most modern known to the roofing business, equips each of the General's enormous mills. Not a dollar is left unspent which would speed up production, increase quality or lower costs.

Materials—the food of the mills—is bought by the General in enormous quantities, and stored. This means the pick of the market and favorable buying, and no loss from idle machinery, due to shortage of materials.

Thus the success of CERTAIN-TEED Roofing is no secret, but is due to a combination of resources and experience without parallel in the roofing business.

CERTAIN-TEED is made of the best quality roofing felt, thoroughly saturated with a scientific blend of soft asphalts, the formula of the General's board of expert chemists. It is then coated with a blend of harder asphalts, which keeps the inner saturation soft and prevents the drying-out so destructive to the ordinary roof.

CERTAIN-TEED is guaranteed for 5, 10 or 15 years, according to ply (1, 2 or 3). Experience proves that it lasts longer.

CERTAIN-TEED is made in rolls; also in slate-surfaced shingles. There is a type of CERTAIN-TEED for every kind of building, with flat or pitched roof, from skyscraper to small residence or out-building.

CERTAIN-TEED is sold by responsible dealers all over the world, at reasonable prices. Investigate it before you decide on any type of roof.

ANCIENT DITCH STILL GOOD

Made by Prehistoric Race, Arizona
Farmer Uses Several Thousand Feet of It.

There exists in several parts of Arizona the remains of irrigation systems that date back to prehistoric days, when quite highly civilized Indian tribes inhabited these valleys.

One of the most famous of these ancient irrigation works is on the Arizona state highway from Prescott to the Grand Canyon. Water has taken from what is known as Monte-zuma's well, a curious natural well 440 feet in diameter and 93 feet deep, except in one spot, where no bottom was reached at 500 feet.

The water carries a great deal of lime in solution, and the sides of the ditch have been preserved by the petrification of the original earth. One rancher at the present time is using several thousand feet of the old ditches, after merely cleaning them out.

F. R. Goodman, state highway division engineer, was once tempted by curiosity to run a line of levels along the bottom of one of these old Indian ditches. He found the grade to be almost perfectly uniform at a rate of 0.01 foot per 100 feet.—Engineering

OLE BULL DID QUEER THINGS

Famous Scandinavian Violinist Makes Egyptians Fall to Their Knees and Pray.

Ole Bull was constantly doing unique things which kept him in the limelight. In the latter years of his life he played the violin on one occasion at the summit of Cheops, the highest pyramid in Egypt. He was attended only by a few friends and a bodyguard of Egyptian guides. When the brilliant tones of the violinist's
Cremora rang out in the dry, sunlit Egyptian air, it is said the Egyptians present were so surprised and fascinated that they fell on their knees, and called on the name of Allah.

Ole Bull was a giant in stature, and the ordinary full-sized violin looked like a toy in his hands. He used a bow two or three inches longer than ordinary, owing to the length of his arm. His fondness for playing lengthy passages in broken chords of three and four notes caused him to use a very flat bridge, which, while it facilitated his chord playing, made it difficult to produce much tone on the inner strings in the higher positions.

Most Popular Library.

Close after the discovery that New York is the greatest city in the world comes the report that its public library is the most used library on earth. Its daily average number of readers is double that of the British Museum of London or the Bibliotheque Nationale of Paris, according to the report for 1915, just published, which says that 10,864,479 books were borrowed in the year and that 2,557,717 persons entered the central building at Fifth avenue and Forty-second street. The war has brought a great increase in the number of people who use the library for research. It has become, the director says, an immense laboratory for scientific investigation, particularly those seeking information regarding new industries.

The Finishing Touch.

Harry had become much interested in playing soldier. At first he was content to march about merely with a stick for a gun. Then, at his request, his mother made him a paper hat to which later she added a plume which Harry had discovered in a neighbor's chicken yard. After a time he found he must have a belt, with a sword.

One day he confronted his mother,
dressed in all his warrior's finery.
"Why how like a soldier you look!"
she exclaimed.

"Yes," he agreed, "but I've been looking at a picture of Napoleon, and he has scrubbing brushes on his shoulders."

A Friend of Shakespeare.

America has many interesting, not to say valuable, Shakespeare relics.
One that is not well known is this epitaph in a churchyard at Fredericksburg, Va.: "Here lies Edward Holden, a medical companion of William Shakespeare, of Avon. He died after a short illness in the year of his life."

Dinner Stories

A colored man employed by an Atlanta merchant was found to be short in his market book accounts, and was accordingly taken to task.
He blamed the grocer, claiming that he had tampered with the book.
Whereupon the employer remonstrated further, saying:

"The account seems to be all right.
Tom, figures don't lie."
"Ah, know," said Tom, "but liars do figger, dar's shore."

"The Methodist minister is noted all over the world for his love of chicken. Once, when I was stationed in Knoxville, I wanted a pair of chickens for our Sunday dinner, and so I called on a suburban farmer's wife whose fame as a chicken raiser was remarkable.
"There had been a Methodist conference in Knoxville that week, and when I told the farmer's wife the nature of my errand she shook her head.
"I'm sorry, Dr. Hess," she said,
"but all my chickens have already entered the ministry."

SOX TOSS GAME

TO BROWNS, 5-2

Slip at Every Opportunity to Take Second Place When St. Louis Gets Break and Wins.

The Sox missed a chance to climb into second place yesterday and because of the excitement centering around the chance they tossed on an eleven inning game to the Browns, 5 to 2. Pete Russell should have had a victory to his credit but his mates with some base running, lost more than enough chances to win the game four or five times.

Frank opposed the Rowlands and was hit safely eleven times. On Russell the Browns got but seven but coupled with a trio of errors, each one of which meant a run, things assumed a different aspect.

The Browns got their first in the second and it was not until the fourth that the Sox scored. They showed another one across in the fifth and to retaliate the Browns tied up the count in the eighth. At ten all they went alone until the eleventh when the St. Louis tribe pushed three runs across, sewing up the Sabbath game.

Not a day passes but Bill Fischer makes new friends in Pittsburgh. And not a day passes but some fan asks the question: "What was Joe Fisher thinking of when he traded Fischer and Schulte for Art Wilson?" There is no answer to the question. Fischer looks like a better catcher than Wilson ever was, and thus far he has proved himself to be a much better batter than he showed at any time he was with Pittsburgh, but on what he displaced there recently, Fischer is a 30 per cent more valuable man to the team. He is a bear-out with the bat against left-hand pitching.

YANKS DEVELOPING A HOME RUN KING

Walter Pipp.

One mark of distinction at least is very apt to go to the Yankees this year. Walter Pipp, the rangy first baseman, is threatening to become the champion slugger of the American league in the matter of home runs. He already has ten to his credit for the season.

YALE BEGINS FOOTBALL PRACTICE AND OTHER BIG SCHOOLS WILL SOON FOLLOW

When Yale calls her men to practice within a few days the 1916 football season will be on. Yale hopes to stage a come-back on the gridiron this fall and the announcement that Tad Jones will be on the coaching staff and that a new system of coaching will be employed has cheered Old Eli's followers. Harry Le Gore and Charlie Taft will give strength to this year's backfield.

The Iron Gates, Last Great Defile of Danube, Where Big Battle Is On

Washington, D. C. Sept. 11.—The Iron Gates, the last great defile of the Danube in its course to the Black sea and the first point at which the Austrians launched an offensive against their new enemies, the Hungarians, is described in the following war geography bulletin which the National Geographic society issued today:

"Contrary to the general belief of readers to whom the term 'Iron Gates of the Danube' is familiar, this famous defile of the chief waterway of Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria and Serbia does not derive its name from precipitous walls of rock through which the waters dash in a narrow channel, as at the Kazan Defile, but from the dangerous boulders that fairly litter the riverbed for a distance of nearly two miles, beginning at the once strongly fortified island of Ada Kaleh which was captured by Hungary in 1878 and is still inhabited by a picturesque colony of 500 Turks.

Opposite this island, on the left bank of the Danube and at the mouth of the inconsequential Bacina river, which here forms the Hungarian-Rumanian boundary, is the attractive little Rumanian custom village of Vericiova on the Budapest-Bucharest railway, 237 miles west of the latter city.

"It was not until 1890 that work was begun in a definite and comprehensive manner to rid the Iron Gates of the gravest dangers to navigation. In that year a Hungarian engineering company undertook the task of removing nearly a million tons of rock from the riverbed. Eight years after the enterprise was inaugurated the canal which had been hewn from the solid rock on the Serbian side of the river was ready to be thrown open to the steamers which ply the Danube from Budapest to the Black sea. The canal was designed to provide a year-round channel ten feet deep whereas the original course of the river was not navigable for more than nine months out of every twelve.

"The opening of the waterway was the occasion for a great celebration in which three monarchs participated.

—Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary, King Alexander of Serbia, and King Carol (Charles I.) of Rumania. The festivities of the day were somewhat marred by the discovery that the current through the canal was so swift that while steamers could rush through it in their downward journey they could not make the trip upward, so that the old river course had to be used for westward-bound traffic.

"When the water is high the rocks of the Iron Gates are completely submerged but they are only a few feet beneath the surface and the boiling, churning waves present a terrifying sight to the timid passenger as his steamer fights its way to the calmer reaches in the vicinity of Orsova (pronounced Orshova), the first town in Hungarian territory, five miles above the rapids and a ten-hour journey by boat below Belgrade, the peace-time capital of Serbia.

"Instead of the gloomy gorge which most travelers expect to find, the banks on each side of the Iron Gates present a beautiful picture of gently sloping hills, beautifully wooded. In the early summer these woods are a fairland of flowers and the winds are fairly weighted with the fragrance of wild blossoms in countless variety, while a short distance from the river, the huntsman finds deer, wild boar, bear and other games in abundance. Enhancing the charm of the scene are the songs of myriad birds which make their home in the forests.

"As the river progresses eastward into Rumania, the wooded banks are succeeded by barren sand ridges."

SHOULD BALD BARBER SELL BALDHEADED MAN A CURE FOR BALDNESS?

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Springfield, Ill., Sept. 11.—Why should a baldheaded barber attempt to induce a baldheaded customer to use a sure cure for baldness? This is one of the questions that will come before the state convention of barbers which started here today. All the baldheaded barbers in Illinois, including those with ropes and switches will be called upon to answer. Some of the better known baldheaded customers also will be asked in to answer.
